Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Microsoft is guilty of anti-competitive tactics. The settlement of these charges should result in a penalty to the guilty party. Instead of allowing Microsoft to benefit from the proposed settlement (increasing their market share in the one industry where they aren't as competitive), why not penalize them? Force Microsoft to purchase and distribute Apple Macintosh computers to schools. That would have the double effect of penalizing their anticompetitive practices, as well providing for a more competitive environment.

Please do the right thing. We American people are counting on you.
